

JNBS FOUNDATION'S COFFEE-TABLE BOOK LAUNCH

Joerio Scott
YOUTHLINK WRITER

TAKE A Look at My World, a book launched by the Jamaica National Building Society (JNBS) Foundation aimed at driving advocacy through photography, saw an overwhelming turnout at The Terrace, Devon House, even under rainy conditions. Photography enthusiasts and JNBS partners made the December 9, 2014 coffee-table book launch a grand culmination to an 11-year project.

Stewart Reeves, chief volunteer photographer and processor of much of the book's photographs, shared with Youthlink, "Last year we had over 1,200 images submitted to us and there were approximately 300 at exhibition standard ... when professional photographers get down to one-third that is when they are really hitting it on the head, so these students are doing very well. Jamaica has a great reservoir of creativity within our young people. The thing is, photography adds to their life and interpretation of Jamaica."

Reeves shared with his captive audience that they have been asked to implement a similar programme in London as there is

PLEASE SEE JNBS, 15

'Take a Look at My World'

CONTRIBUTED

Levy imprints a congratulatory note after the successful launch of the JNBS Foundation's coffee-table book, 'Take a Look at My World' on Tuesday, December 9 at The Terrace, Devon House. The book features a compilation of photographic work taken over the past decade by former and current participants in the Foundation's Resolution Project, which caters to students in rural high schools across Jamaica.

Earl Jarrett, general manager, JNBS.

Mikhail Henry (left) and Earl Jarrett, general manager, JNBS.

From left are Ashley Stephenas; Dr Marsha Smalling; Earl Jarrett, general manager, JNBS; Tehri-Ann Brown; Mikhail Henry and Jodi Morgan.